

DOLLAR-PER-RECRUIT DRIVE IS LAUNCHED BY LOCAL GUARDSMEN

One dollar a recruit! This sum is being paid to members of the local national guard company for enlisting men in the drive now being conducted to boost the roster of the company to 90 men for federal recognition.

In conjunction with the state-wide campaign being held to bring the organization up to the federal standard, the Jamesville company launched its plans Monday night at the weekly drill in the armory. The organization was split into two divisions, which will be subdivided into teams. The factions will scour the city to see which side can secure the most men. Some form of prize will be given to the winners. The campaign continues throughout the week. As regards strike duty of the national guard, the local unit has received the following from the adjutant general's department:

"The union picket patrol with- out the right to be on strike duty, the same as it will protect the property that is being picketed. The Wisconsin national guard will not be called on for strike duty unless there is imminent danger to life or property. These are points brought out in a letter by General Holway to George E. Dee, Chippewa Falls editor, in reply to reports that unions were seeking reorganization of the guard."

A new ruling which it is hoped by officers of the local company may aid recruiting applies to men drawing compensation under the war risk act. This order reads that the militia bureau of the war department declares that the compensation of soldiers under the act will be treated the same as the pension act applying to soldiers in the Civil War. Pensioners have heretofore served in the national guard without question as to their right to continue in receipt of federal pension money unless there came a call into active service of the United States. The same treatment, says Orlando Holway, state adjutant general, will apply to ex-soldiers of the world war.

COSTLY BUTTERFLIES

London, Eng.—Beauty cannot compare with rarity in the view of the collector, but among a number of exotic lepidoptera sold at Stevens' sale rooms, Covent Garden, many specimens provided a combination of both, the result being that the highest recorded price for a butterfly was realized.

This was a male specimen of A. Godmani, from Brazil, which fell to a bidder for $150. The insect is a rare species, never before it is believed, offered for sale under the hammer.

Among British butterflies included in the sale a variety of a male Purple Emperor, captured in 1894 in the New Forest, sold for $50, the approximate value of a typical specimen being about 75 cents.

WITHOUT MATCHES

By Adella Belle Beard.
To forget or lose your matches, or let the fire go out accidentally, will not be the calamity it might prove if you always carry a piece of flint and a strong steel of some kind in your pocket when you go on a hike.

The use of flint and steel for starting a fire is only going back several generations to the period when men had no matches and all outdoor boys and girls, you among them, should know how to light a fire in this primitive fashion. Practice at home; practice until you can make a spark of it every time, then you can rely on your skill when the occasion comes to use it.

A piece of strong steel shaped like the one shown in our illustration is most convenient to use and to carry, but the back of a knife will answer if it must. The flint should be large enough to hold easily, and the way to produce the sparks is to strike the edge of the flint a quick, glancing downward blow with the steel.

That part is soon mastered. The trick is to catch the spark and keep it alive. To do this you must use dry, very dry tinder. Hold your flint so that the sparks will fall into your small bunch of tinder and when a volume of smoke arises, fan it with your hand and then gently blow it into flame. Have ready shredded Birch bark, or other quickly lighted stuff, to use as a match and with it catch your flame immediately and apply it to your kindling.

It is safest to carry tinder with you packed in a small tin box to keep out dampness. You can make this at home. Tear out a piece of short strips of old cotton cloth and scorch it in the oven, then pull it apart into small pieces. Dry it and so that it lights easily. Dry moss, dry grass, dried willow catkins take sparks readily; also the dried inner bark of Cedar rubbed into fine shreds.

LINCOLN AND THE SLAVES

By R. S. Alexander.
"Old Abe's looking mighty frisky this morning," said Hunting Bye's friend, the mayor, looking at the statue of Lincoln in front of the town hall. "But he has a right to look that way; it's his birthday."

"Who was Old Abe and what did he do?" asked the boy from the North Woods.

"His real name was Abraham Lincoln and he freed the slaves."

"Slaves? What are they?"
"They were persons who were owned by other people. Long ago, when two peoples of nations fought, the members of the nation which conquered took the men and women of the other as slaves; that is they made them their property and forced them to work for them. The white men won over the Great Water. These black men were still wild and uncivilized without approved methods of warfare. Thus they were easy to capture. These slaves were needed in the southern part of the country to help grow cotton. The industry of the north was so organized that it could not use them. So they were sent mostly to the south."

"Gradually people began to feel that slavery was wrong. England, one of the greatest of the nations across the Big Water, prohibited it nearly one hundred years ago. The people in the north of this country wished at that time to follow England's example. But the people of the south, who had grown up among the slaves and had been trained by the conditions about them to think that slavery was right, did not wish to abolish it.

"The controversy over the question became hotter and hotter until, finally, it resulted in the great war which won the victory for the free party which was opposed to slavery. For four long years the conflict lasted. During the war, Lincoln issued the famous Emancipation Proclamation which declared that the slaves should be free. Under his leadership the north was victorious."

"But don't the people of the south hate the north and Lincoln?"
"No, this was like a quarrel between two brothers. No matter how hard they may fight each other they love each other just the same after they get over their anger. Both north and south now see that slavery was wrong and are glad that it was abolished. So both pay tribute to the great Lincoln."

GLASSCO URGES ALL FARMERS TO ATTEND BIG MEETING HERE

To satisfy queries as to what the farm bureau movement is, R. T. Glasco, county agent, has issued a statement preparatory to the meeting to be held here next Monday, in the city hall at 2 o'clock to consider the formation of such an organization for this county.

Taking as an example the work being done in Illinois, Mr. Glasco says that 50,000 farms of that state are affiliated with the farm bureau. From the county farm bureaus, in states the Illinois Agricultural association has been built up which is active in caring for the interests of the farmer in marketing his produce and helping him to buy economically.

"The farm bureau movement in Wisconsin is in its infancy," declares the county agent, "while our sister states have completed their organizations. It is up to Rock county to take the initiative in getting Wisconsin in line."

"November 12 and 13 were red letter days for the farmers of the United States. At that time an organization was completed which is to have national scope. Representatives from 32 states met at the hotel La Salle, Chicago, and drafted a constitution for the American Farm Bureau federation. Most of the states have ratified this constitution and March 1, 1920, the organization of the federation will be taken."

"Rock county, being one of the most progressive in the state in the opinion of farmers, the county should join this strong federation of farmers. The farmers know that in a strong organization they will have a voice in the making of laws. While they do not intend to dominate politics, they do intend to have something to say at what price they shall sell their products."

"Every farmer in the county should be at the meeting in Jamesville. If this meeting is a success, the remainder of the work will be comparatively easy."

"But don't the people of the south hate the north and Lincoln?"

PARIS 1920 FLOODS PROVE DISASTROUS

(By Associated Press.)

Paris (By Mail).—The floods of 1920 were a disaster almost equal to that of 1830 for the riverside suburbs of Paris. Houses on the banks of the Seine and Marne in the vicinity of Paris are built in the city hall at 2 o'clock to consider the formation of such an organization for this county.

The worst sufferers were the inhabitants of Maisons-Alfort and Alfortville, suburbs situated at the confluence of the Seine and Marne just above Paris. The ground there lies low and gets the benefit of the floods from both rivers. Most of the houses were flooded up to the second story and probably longer on account of the great amount of illness in the city.

Miss Marie Schindley, Jamesville, returned to her home last night, after being the guest of Mrs. Edward Bellman for a few days.

Mrs. Ed. Colton and Mrs. George Wilder, Clinton, S. D., who were called to Cookville on account of the death of their mother, Mrs. Catherine Miller, are visiting relatives in and around Evansville.

WHO'S WHO in the Day's News

SENATOR ROBERT L. OWEN.
Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma is being talked of as one of the democratic presidential possibilities. Should such an honor be accorded, it would be simply another chapter in an interesting political career. At 18 he won a scholarship in the Washington and Virginia and in 1888 he was honored with the degree of LL.D. by that institution. During the last year of his college life he took seven courses, including Greek in which language he is a recognized authority.

He taught school in Maryland, and then moved to the Cherokee nation in the Indian territory, where he became principal teacher of the Cherokee Indian asylum. In January, 1881, he was dropped from the roll of teachers by the Cherokee board of education. He went immediately to Tahlequah, the seat of the Cherokee nation, and having a right under the Cherokee law to examine the records, obtained evidence against the board of education of malfeasance and fraud.

As a result of this investigation he was placed at the head of the school of the Cherokee nation. In 1888 he was appointed Indian agent for the five civilized tribes of the Indian territory. During the controversy over the Cherokee board of education, a conspiracy was formed to assassinate Mr. Owen, and for a year he was the central figure of a feud, and compelled a treaty of peace to be arranged.

Territory's First Court.
At the time he became Indian agent there was no court of civil jurisdiction in the Indian territory. He caused one to be established, making the first draft of the law establishing a court for the whole of the Indian territory. He organized the first bar association of Oklahoma and was its first secretary.

At that time the Cherokees owned what was known as the "Cherokee Strip." This was rented to the "Cherokee Strip Live-Stock Association" for $100,000 per annum, or at the rate of 1 1/2 cents per acre. When the question of renewing the lease came up Mr. Owen, as the real representative of the Cherokees, insisted upon a larger rental, and he organized a rival company to take over the lease. This battle, which was fought with many sensational incidents of typical frontier warfare, resulted in the Cherokees receiving $200,000 rental a year.

Owen's record in the senate has been consistently progressive. He organized the democratic party in the Indian territory in 1912 and in progressive lines. For many years he has been the president of the National Popular Government league. From the minute he was elected to the senate in 1907 he has been a persistent advocate of popular government.

Perhaps the achievement that centered the attention of the entire world upon the Oklahoma senator was the federal reserve bank. In 1913 Senator Owen was made chairman of the senate committee on banking and currency. He immediately began work on the construction of the federal reserve bank.

Senator Owen really began his fight for the federal reserve banking system 20 years ago. In 1898, five years before the passing of the federal reserve act, he made a four-hour speech in the senate, the principles of which were afterward written into the federal reserve act. Other contribution by the Oklahoma senator to the legislation accomplished under the Wilson administration include the federal loan act, the federal reserve foreign bank act to extend the system to other countries; the silver bullion law to protect India from financial panic, and the allies from commercial tragedy; the conservation of public resources; the eight-hour day, minimum wage and workmen's compensation act; the American merchant marine; woman suffrage; prohibition; the control of private monopoly by the government; the defense of the rights of periodicals and magazines for proper postal rates.

During the contest over the peace treaty in the senate the Oklahoma senator has been one of the chief supporters of President Wilson, though he has repeatedly asserted that reservations intended to safeguard the rights of the United States would not affect any major principle or detract from the value of the league of nations project.

SOLDIERS HAD NOT HEARD OF PEACE!

Paris.—In spite of the solemn affirmation made by the German Government several months ago to the effect that there were no more French prisoners of war in Germany, seven soldiers were found a few weeks ago in German jails.

One of the soldiers of the 131st Regiment of Infantry, named Louis Boucher, aged 20, returned to his home at Dijon after being a prisoner in Germany since June 6 last year. In a Danzig fortress he was imprisoned in a dark underground cell, where he saw nothing and heard nothing from the day he entered the cell up to some weeks ago, when his captivity came to an end by the arrival of French officers at the prison. These officers visited all the cells of the fortress, and to their amazement they discovered seven French soldiers, including young Louis Boucher.

Not one of them knew anything of the conclusion of peace. These seven soldiers were immediately set free, and they have been repatriated.

STATE INCOME TAX DATA

Assessor Frank A. Taylor Writes Series of Three Articles for Information of General Public.

EXEMPTIONS AND DEDUCTIONS

This paper will deal principally with form No. 1 "return for individuals." It is a general purpose form for use by the artisan, professional, merchant, salesman, casualist and others. Each question will be dealt with separately, beginning with question No. 1.

Q. 14.—"For Merchants and Manufacturers"—Enter here that part of your inventory which represents the merchandise you manufacture or sell—goods, materials and products. Do not include furniture, fixtures, book accounts, stationery, machinery, bills payable, bills receivable, cash, or other words under this question the materials from which your profit is derived. Firms and copartnerships should never make a return on form No. 1. There is a special form for firms and partnerships.

Many merchants make grievous mistakes in answering question No. 14. They fail to realize the purpose of this inventory must be given here. Some report an amount far under what it should be, others an excess. This office retains all previous year's reports, and always checks back to see that inventories correspond.

Must Give Net Cost. Q. 15—"Goods and Materials Purchased."—Do not include household articles, such as automobiles, for private use, musical instruments, or fixtures, surgical instruments, or non 15 concerns the merchant manufacturer and professional man, almost altogether. Others seldom use them.

Q. 16—"Wages, bonuses and salaries paid to employees."—Do not include wages paid to help in the home or happen that the individual owner or store charges under this head a salary for himself, which cannot be allowed. A certain sum is drawn each week or month, it should be charged to the individual account for record and not enter into the salary of the business. If merchants will please observe this in the current return, it will lighten the work of this office materially. Merchants who are allowed to receive a stated salary but are required to list the salary drawn, in their individual return. There is no exception for the firm or partnership, while the individual merchant enjoys the full privilege of the exemption.

No Allowance for Repairs. Q. 17—"Rent of business premises only."—Do not include rent of your residence; you are not required to list the estimated rental value of your residence.

Q. 18—"Furniture and Equipment."—Does not include household furniture. It refers principally to property that bears an assessment, such as office furniture, store equipment, and any other articles that are used in the business in order to produce the income.

Q. 19—"Losses."—Sustained within the year, and not compensated by insurance or Trust company. Losses are usually confined to property that produces or helps to produce the income. For example, a warehouse burned during the year, and insured for $5,000.00. This warehouse is used for the storage of goods and merchandise in which you are dealing and from which your income is derived. Your loss without question is $5,000.00. On the other hand, if you own a pleasure car worth $2,000.00, you neglect to insure it. It burns, perhaps it is a total loss. You are not allowed a loss of this nature in your income return, for the reason that this car is no way contributed to your income. Owing to the complex nature of losses, this office advises every person who has a loss to list same, and supply full information as to the character, and date. If there is any reason why it can not be allowed, notice will be sent the taxpayer.

The next and final paper will consider dividends, interest taxes, ordinary and necessary expenses and exemptions. F. A. TAYLOR, Dist. No. 4.

COST OF CONVICTING PROFITERS RUNS HIGH

[AN ASSOCIATED PRESS.] London (By Mail).—Twenty-four convictions obtained before the 1,900 anti-profiteering tribunals set up throughout England have cost more than £1,000 each, it was declared by Captain Wedgwood Benn in the House of Commons during discussion of a proposed extension of the profiteering act for another period of six months.

Captain Benn summarized the results of the act, during its first six months of life, by saying: "Nineteen hundred committee have been appointed; 1,935 cases have been heard—one case per committee; 24 convictions have been obtained; £25,000 has been spent. And this is living on the edge of the profiteering act for another period of six months."

Supporters of the bill argued that six months had not given the administrators of the law fair opportunity of demonstrating its worth. The proposed extension of six months was voted.

Big Value in Tires for Small Cars

Back of the manufacture of Goodyear Tires for small cars is the same purpose to supply high value in the product that is behind the manufacture of the Goodyear Tires that equip the most expensive automobiles built.

This purpose is expressed by the enormous resources, extraordinary skill and scrupulous care applied to the manufacture of Goodyear Tires in the largest tire factory in the world devoted solely to the 30x3-, 30x3½, and 31x4-inch sizes.

The effect of this endeavor is noted in the fact that last year more cars using these sizes were factory-equipped with Goodyear Tires than with any other kind.

It is also noted in the fact that, if you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell or other car requiring the sizes mentioned, you can secure Goodyear Tires and Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes at the nearest Goodyear Service Station.

DR. NOLEN'S CITY PLAN.

Like any well organized business a city should have a definite plan to work to, that effort and money may be expended without loss and so that the greatest results may be obtained. Dr. John Nolen dispelled any doubt in the minds of members of the Twilight club last night that a city plan was the proper method of procedure, in an intensely interesting talk which he emphasized with a well selected lot of lantern slides.

Dr. Nolen's plan is a large one and contemplates covering a number of years in a growing city, possibly a generation or more, but it clearly saves a "hodge podge," the natural sequence resulting from an indefinite line of action. The doctor did not generalize in his statements in this regard, but presented concrete evidence to bear out the expensive and unsatisfactory conditions which other cities had experienced in attempting to build civically without a plan. He also demonstrated the accomplishments of communities which had followed a well developed plan.

That Janesville can be made one of the most beautiful cities in the country, and at a saving of time and money by adopting a city building plan such as has been worked out by Dr. Nolen is evident to anyone who will take the time to look over the charts and recommendations already prepared. The one thing which possibly is confusing is the bigness of the thing. One must keep constantly before him the fact that it is for the future and comes along a little at a time. This we do know, Janesville is growing and will keep on growing and with that growth will come the need for municipal participation, and who is wise enough among us to steer the wheels of progress in the right channels?

You can think of any number of things that will need all the foresight of the best minds in the community. For instance, what will we do about the location of factories, and they are coming as sure as fate. Shall we have factory zones or will they drop in anywhere? Surely, we want all of them that will come, but you will agree that for the city's benefit as well as for the greatest benefit to the new factory, certain districts should be allotted for this purpose. The city building plan provides for just such questions and covers every phase of the future growth of Janesville. It's a guard against mistakes and makes sure against undoing costly errors. Mayor Welsh in an enthusiastic 10-minute talk indicated his interest in the plan and with the whole-hearted support of the council Janesville will enter the ranks of those progressive cities whose fame quickly spreads across the country as a community worth living in.

A BIGGER AND STRONGER RACE.

Every now and then some medical man arises to bewail the alarming degeneracy of the human race. Frequently his conclusion is drawn from the results of a physical examination of school children. A large percentage are found to be defective in this or that particular. None is absolutely normal.

Or he points to modern unhygienic habits of over-eating and under-exercising. He says that trolley cars and automobiles have done away with walking. In "the good old days" most boys had chores to do about the home calling their muscles into play. Also fewer girls were engaged in office work and other sedentary occupations.

The pessimist points to the vigorous open air life of the pioneer of the plains, the great-grandfather of the present generation, and says it is no wonder if we have degenerated physically if not mentally. We have always felt that there is something wrong with his theories and now we know what it is: They aren't true.

Dr. Dudley Sargent, of Harvard, has as good claims as anyone to rank as an authority on the subject, for he has been a professor of physical training for nearly 50 years, and he says American girls have gained an inch in height and 10 pounds in weight since 1893, when he compiled some statistics for scientific purposes. The average gain of young men students at American colleges in that period has been two inches in height and nine pounds in weight.

We prefer to accept this cheerful statement. Regardless of the high standing of its author and the proof he presents, it is more logical than the others. In the last quarter of a century there has been a greater popular participation in athletic sports of all kinds than ever before, especially by girls and women. In the same time medical science has made wonderful progress in the conquest of diseases that sapped vitality. The "experts" who allege any general deterioration in the human physique are arguing from limited knowledge. Nor need we depend upon statistics for their refutation. All we have to do is to look around us.

NEIGHBORLY CRITICISM.

You can't hope to escape the criticism of your neighbors. If you drive a car popularly known as a "tin lizzie" or a "road louse" there are those who will say about you that you ought to be ashamed to be so careless of appearances, that your family should be saved such disgrace and that your "position in the community" demands something better of you. Freely, also you are referred to "behind your back, of course" as the original Mr. T. Wad.

And if on the other hand you drive a closed car of lovely design, with fresh (or artificial) flowers in a silver vase hung so the envious pedestrian may get a good view of your luxury, the neighbors say you are "headling toward ruin," they wonder "how he does it," and broadly hint that probably you "don't pay your debts."

JUST FOLKS

Edgar A. Guest

THE PURPOSE.

One worked for riches day by day,
One toiled to know the joy of fame,
Another slaved his life away
The friendship of the world to claim;
Yet these men missed the souls they sought,
While one who sought no golden crown
Or glory for his work, but thought
Of serving only as he ought,
Was given both fortune and renown.

One worked because he would be rich,
One toiled because he wanted fame,
One saw in glory something which
He thought it would be nice to claim;
But one gave little thought to these,
And tried to serve a greater plan—
He found in work the joys that please,
The thrill of solving mysteries
And building for his fellow man.

Better it is to love the task
Than its reward of fame or gold;
They that the glory only ask
Shall be forgotten when they're old.
But he who'll stand from day to day,
And give no thought unto his fate,
Working to build a better way
Where men may walk and children play,
Shall in good time be counted great.

PAPER CONSERVATION.

The publishers of the country are loyally doing their bit to relieve the shortage of print paper. In December they used 3,565 tons less than in November. Production in the same period increased 21,745 tons. It is an example of united effort that alone can save many of the smaller newspapers from disaster.

American privates in Coblenz, as a result of exchange rates, now are paid 8,000 marks a month as the equivalent of their $30 pay, which is more than high German officers get! Well, they proved that they are worth more.

In one cargo sent to Spain this week were 500 American automobiles. In a country accustomed to bullfighting it must have taken some salesman to land that order.

The Average Man says he's just old-fashioned enough to think that when folks are uncontrollably anxious to get somewhere, they don't spend half a day hunting up an airplane.

Now they say clothing prices "won't come down until 1921." But what the average man wants to know is if they are likely to come down then.

So many hats are in the presidential ring that it's a safe bet some of them will be kicked around a bit.

Teaching the Deaf

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN, Director

Janesville Daily Gazette Information Bureau,
Washington, D. C.

Kensington, Md., Feb. 11.—In this suburb of Washington 16 deaf children are being taught to read, write and do all the other things that normal girls and boys learn. When they leave the school here, these children will go to college, offices, and in social life on a practically equal basis with people who have all their faculties.

It is not so long since a deaf person was always set down as deaf and dumb. He could not hear, and therefore, how could he be expected to talk? Sign language or a pad and pencil were his means of communicating with the world. Then lip reading and reproduction of positions of lips and teeth to make the sounds were developed, and now in this little Kensington home-school, where deaf children are taught to read, write and do all the other things that normal girls and boys learn, the sign language is barred entirely.

Miss Anna Reinhardt, principal of the Kensington school, says that the school is not in the least like an ordinary day or boarding school. She believes that to get the best results with deaf children the best method is to have them in a home atmosphere.

The school is a large, comfortable country house with broad porches, and surrounded by sloping lawns. Inside, it is exactly like the home of a large family. The children are in rooms with desks screwed into the floor. The older children, of about 11 to 12 years, have small bedrooms and desks set up in living rooms at lesson time. The younger ones of kindergarten and primary ages are taught in a cottage annex. This school was founded by the late Dr. H. H. Harkness, who died in 1908.

Many of the children who come to a school for the deaf have been misunderstood or neglected at home because of their defect. A child normally begins to talk at two years, and when speech is retarded long after that time the cause should be investigated for possible deafness. Often parents think that a baby who does not talk is only slow in learning, and sometimes several years elapse before they really understand that the child is deaf. By this time the child may have become habitually irritable or may have developed a terrible temper due to its being continually expected to react as a normal child would.

A child of this sort placed in a school for the deaf at seven or eight years may not advance so rapidly as much younger pupils. Miss Reinhardt has in her school half a dozen pupils of from three to six years, some of whom talk very plainly than the older children.

Reinhardt has in her school half a dozen pupils of from three to six years, some of whom talk very plainly than the older children. The youngest pupils were being taught to understand and interpret lip reading as they made pictures with colored squares of paper. As a sample of the progress of this class, the teacher held one little boy on her knee and asked him, "Show me your nose," and so on, speaking distinctly but with ordinary rapidity. The boy, in each case pointed to the part mentioned and repeated "nose" or "ear," smiling all the while, and keeping his eyes fixed on the teacher's face to catch every word.

Only in one case did he fail to understand and respond quickly, and that was when ear and nose were confused. These two words, the teacher explained, look alike and are difficult for him to distinguish.

Speak With Quicker Tongues
Some of these deaf children talk

in natural tones, while others, especially those deaf from birth, speak without expression or with a queer accent. All of them who have had special training for three or four years are easily understood. As they grow older they seem to lose some of the strain noticeable in the voices of the smaller ones, and the effect of other sounds in the back of the mouth are most difficult for the deaf to grasp and reproduce, but even these are mastered after repeated illustrations and much practice.

These children are starting out in life without the ability to hear and with which a handicap in the way of learning to speak and yet when you look in on them at lessons, meals, or a game, they are as happy as the other children. They laugh and talk. Sometimes they all talk at once just like any group of happy school children.

Arithmetic and other lessons are put on a practical basis. Learning to read is for them a matter of being able to enjoy more stories, and their letters from home. Most of them are voracious readers.

Music is little more than a name to children totally deaf, but a sense of rhythm is taught them by means of a piano. A little upright piano is pushed out into the middle of a room and several children stand at the back with their hands against the keys. A teacher plays two chords over and over—first a loud chord and then a soft one. Through their unusually sensitive fingers the children feel the vibration, and say as she plays, "One, two, one, two," accenting the one, just as the pianist has. When she changes to a heavy chord two little ones they feel the difference instantly and change the count to "One, two, three," and "low" notes. The sensitiveness of the deaf to vibrations was shown when the other day one of the pupils remarked:

"Some one is playing the piano downstairs."

"Yes," said the teacher. "How do you know?"

"I can feel it coming up through my feet," the child answered.

Most of Miss Reinhardt's family have been deaf since birth, or lost their hearing through illness. Where the auditory nerve is altogether destroyed there is no hope of any recovery, but where the hearing is only partly lost, the deafness may be permanent or total deafness.

Can Hear Some Days
One child can hear sometimes if spoken to directly in private. On some days she will catch every word spoken in an ordinary tone close to her. At other times, when the air is less clear, she cannot hear at all, and the girl can possibly wear an acousticon and hear more plainly, but while she is still so young an instrument might possibly injure the delicate hearing apparatus.

It is 11 years since Miss Reinhardt established her school in Kensington, and she says that the entire profit of 11 years is represented by the cottage annex, which she bought.

"Work of this sort," she says, "cannot be profitable, because even if a school were taking in thousands of dollars it would not put the proceeds into equipment."

The work of developing deaf children should be endowed through a number of schools for the deaf, and the deaf should be encouraged to pay an adequate corps of teachers, and to keep the household warm, well fed and comfortable on the amount paid in by the pupils.

Sometimes Miss Reinhardt feels as if the financial end of the game must be a losing one, but on the other side of the scale she is winning so heavily that she is encouraged to keep on, hoping that some wealthy and benevolent fairy will really come to the aid of deaf children.

That dollar which the Father His Country is said to have thrown at George had thrown an apple at the farmer. Chapman might have secretary of the Federal Reserve board, attained that important position as a direct result of his skill in teaching certain people who annoyed him. Ordinary government employees must flock in droves through the narrow doors of public buildings.

Webb Chapman tried this for some time, and finally found a way to effect a more comfortable working condition. He found that there was a west door to the Treasury where the congestion amounted to practically nothing where there was so much room a man could walk in or out with a raised umbrella. He investigated Chapman's eye. He investigated Chapman's eye. He investigated Chapman's eye.

That was Chapman's eye. He set his mind on it, and displayed so much usefulness around the Federal Reserve board that when J. A. Broderick resigned as secretary of the board, Chapman was appointed to the vacancy. Chapman's eye on his efforts until today he sits in this extraordinary important position, near the top of the American banking system.

This sort of policy has been characteristic of Chapman. He started out in life as a clerk at the general offices of the Southern Railway in Washington. Half of the population of the nation's capital has done this. This job did not look big enough to Chapman. He went to the senate committee on inter-oceanic canals was in the market for a high grade court reporter to take down its proceedings. Now Chapman was not a stenographer at all, but he heard of this job and wanted it. For ten days he worked on a shorthand system of his own invention, better than anything yet devised. He applied for the job and immediately got it, although he was in competition with a number of other men.

Mr. Chapman hails from Maryland. His family, back in the Revolutionary days, owned about a third of the Maryland bank of the Potomac opposite Mount Vernon as George Washington owned on the Virginia

Q. Will hot water freeze quicker than cold water? P. O. D. A. The Bureau of Standards says that the common notion that hot water freezes quicker than cold water, when both are subjected to the same temperature, is untrue. Water when heated loses most of its dissolved air, and in frozen form contains much more compressed air than water which contains air. As a result, hot water pipes, if allowed to freeze, are much more likely to burst than are cold water pipes.

D. A. R. ADOPT TWO ARMENIAN ORPHANS

Two Armenian orphans are to be adopted by the local chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, according to plans made yesterday afternoon at a meeting held at the home of Mrs. Jessie Nowlan, St. Lawrence avenue. John Gross, one of the chairmen of the committee for Rock county, stated the needs of this people. The treasurer, Miss Franc Edwards, is in charge of the collection of this fund. Stanislas J. T. Wortendyke, E. E. Loomis, A. Magee, G. Sutherland, and A. C. Houghton were appointed to assist her.

A start in Americanization work has been made by naming Mrs. T. O. Nolan as chairman of a committee to look up foreigners who are not naturalized and induce them to take steps to become so. It was learned by Mrs. Nolan that the vocational school has evening classes to teach the rudiments of citizenship.

Another valuable work to be undertaken is to teach patriotism in the schools. To this end funds were appropriated yesterday to purchase posters lettered with the American flag, which are to be hung in the school rooms and small copies of the same to be furnished to pupils. Tentative plans were made to provide a patriotic picture which should be exhibited in a moving picture matinee free to school children.

A further step in Americanization was made by the appropriation of $25 to help a struggling industrial school, "Saluda," among the mountaineers of North Carolina.

Mrs. E. B. Heinsdorf and Mrs. Clara Vandewater asked for transfers from the local chapter of the D. A. R. to the chapter of the D. A. R. in the town of Beloit. The names of Mrs. Arthur Granger and Mrs. Mary Hopkins were voted upon favorably for membership.

It was voted that invitations be extended to the St. Atkinson and Beloit chapters to attend the April meeting as guests of the local chapter. It was also voted to have a musicale to be held at library hall, in charge of Mrs. J. L. Wilcox.

The topic to be discussed for the afternoon was Mexico. A paper had been prepared by Miss Fanny Jackson on the subject of foreign investments in Mexico, but was not read. Mrs. Horace Blackman was in charge of the program. Miss Clara Schwartz and Miss Jolly Strang sang.

Ban Johnson Gives In; Big League War Is Over

APPOINT BOARD TO SETTLE DISPUTES; REINSTATE MAYS

Chicago, Feb. 11.—Factional strife in the American League vanished early today when after an all night session concessions put forward by President B. Ban Johnson and his five "loyal" adherents and the insurgents, President Comiskey of the Chicago club, Frazee of Boston and Ruppert of New York, were accepted. President Johnson found his authority as league executive altered so far as major disciplinary actions were concerned. An arbitration board—reviewing committee of two members being appointed to investigate all punishments ordered in excess of ten days suspension and $100 fines, while on the other hand, it was agreed to dismiss three suits brought against him by the New York club.

Other points in the settlement of the dispute which at times threatened serious consequences for the league's future, including reinstatement of Pitcher Carl Mays of the New York club.

Carl Mays of the New York club whose purchase from the Boston Red Sox last summer started the trouble; to award third place in the American League race to New York and to appoint a commission on arbitration hold offices for two years. Colonel Ruppert and Clark Griffith of Washington were appointed on the arbitration board which also will act as a reviewing committee. In order to agree to the settlement, the disputed question to a federal judge in Chicago.

Support Johnson. President Johnson's position was supported in the long executive session which preceded the reconciliation by Frank Navin of Detroit, James Duggan of Cleveland, St. Louis, and Connie Mack of Philadelphia. Col. Ruppert headed the minority faction and was supported by Harry Frazee of Boston and Charles Comiskey of Chicago. The settlement of the feud in the American League cleared the field for the business of making final arrangements for the 1920 season.

The National League owners adopted a schedule of 154 games for the 1920 season and accepted the new rules, formulated at a meeting of the joint rules committee of the two major leagues.

Minor to be heard. A meeting of the National Association of Minor Leagues was called at the joint meeting of major and minor leagues which was expected to be held today and at which it was hoped an agreement for resumption of relations between the majors and the minors would be reached. Relations were suspended three years ago.

The Western League club owners agreed on a schedule for 1920 but did not adopt it. A special meeting would be held in Kansas City, Monday, when the schedule will be adopted.

The Three Eye League adopted its schedule late last night. The American Association virtually finished its business yesterday.

Appropriate Greetings and Games For the St. Valentine's Day Hostess

Some of the newest 1920 Valentines and place cards.

Many are the legends which cluster about St. Valentine's day and all of them explain in one way or another why that day of all others is dedicated to the expression of love. Here are a few of the modern ways of telling the "same old story." Place cards and invitations can be easily made by the prospective hostess. Correspondence cards decorated gaily with valentine symbols, hearts, arrows, and cupid's which may be obtained in gummed seals will do for the invitations and small plain white cards of the calling card size will be suitable for place cards. An original title verse may be written by the clever hostess or any number of verses may be found which make appropriate invitations. These are effective if written in red ink.

The time and the address may be placed on the lower corners of the cards, the signature just below the verse. The cards may be cut in heart shape and if desired may be of red or pink cardboard instead of white.

As the guests arrive the hostess gives to each girl a key and to each man a heart, made of water color paper, the hearts red, the keys gold. The men are told to find the keys which fit their hearts. As each heart contains a keyhole of different size, cut in the center, and only one key will fit it, this causes a deal of merriment and serves to "start things going."

The partners thus determined join in a "Heart Hunt," for which tiny baskets may be provided. The hostess has previously hidden about the room a large number of tiny heart shaped candies or the old fashioned "conversation lozenges." To the couple finding the largest number of these a prize is awarded. Two couple dolls may serve as the joint prize, or heart shaped pincushions or something of that sort.

A FEW GOOD GAMES

Wedding ring sitting is a lot of fun. Attach a plain band ring to a string and suspend it at a height of about five feet from the floor. Each guest in turn is asked to stand at a given place in the room, about 10 feet from the suspended ring, and point a pencil at the center of the ring. He is then told to walk rapidly toward the ring in an effort to put the pencil through it, all the time rigidly holding the position assumed when aim was taken. To the successful one, marriage within the year is promised.

Then there is the heart stringing game, each guest being given a needle and thread. In the center of the table there is a pile of paper hearts, and three minutes are allowed to see who can string the most hearts on the thread.

Another stunt is to fill a glass jar full of candy hearts and have each guest guess the number it contains. The one who comes nearest the correct number wins the jar and its contents.

To secure supper partners, the hostess may bring in two little baskets of candy hearts, the contents of each basket being connected with those of the other by a perfect tangle of baby ribbons. The girls each select a heart from one basket and each man from the other. Lined up on opposite sides of the room the two groups are connected by the tangled ribbons. At a signal from the hostess they begin to unwind, only to become more enmeshed and confused as the cords cross and recross. But at last the heart of the girl and the heart of the man are freed from the others and united.

Neonah—Thousands of ducks occupy the open water in Lake Winnebago near the mouth of the Fox river, and scores are being shot by pot hunters daily, according to complaints which are to be registered with state conservation and federal game wardens. Rifles and shotguns are being used.

The Daily Novelette

THE FATAL MOTTO.

Ever since they had moved over from Stony Gulch, Ruff Neck, the cave woman, had been hustling to squeeze into Rock Top society.

At first, the elite refused to as much as look at Hard Head, his wife, and daughter. Flat Chest, what claims had they on old families of Rock Top who could trace their lineage way back to the old Neanderthal—one of the first families? If not?

Who were they, anyhow? Where did they spring from? Of course, the jump from Stony Gulch to Rock Top didn't count, which was a high one none of them doubted. Evidently, the Hard Head gang were of that vulgar class known as the new-riches—the social climbers.

"Hardy, old rock," began Ruff Neck one day. "Don't you think it's about time we were giving our dear Flat Chest a coming-out party? She must get acquainted."

"Certainly, Ruffy. Go to it. Every bone, chop, steak and skin I own shall go toward making you and Flat Chest happy. Here's good luck to you!" And he gave her a loving tap on the jaw that sent her dizzily to the far corner of the cave.

Encouraged with this mark of love and respect, Ruff Neck resolved to spare nothing on Flat Chest's party. And for the next month, she and Hard Head and Flat Chest sat chattering and chipping out the invitations and delivering them one at a time, to the members of the Rock Top society.

Insisted on Hard Head's getting a new Hunkydory hide for a suit for himself, a lovely string of muttonoid teeth for herself and a beautiful willie-jigger girdle for Flat Chest.

"What's all the rumpus about?" growled Hard Head, several days later, as crash after bang and bang after crash came into them while eating the delicious stew of muttonoid Chiropodon stew. Hard Head strode angrily to the door. Then he stopped.

For the opening to the cave was sealed up tight with 110 huge slabs of stone—the answers, all in the affirmative, to Ruff Neck's invitations to the party, for she had chattered their family over and over on each invitation, the figure of the first man, Pithecanthropus Erectus, with club in hand, ruling the world. Thus proving her right to belong.

Princess Elizabeth.

GENEVA—Following the marriage in Vevey, Switzerland, of Mrs. W. B. Leeds, formerly of New York, to Prince Christopher of Greece an announcement was made of the engagement of Princess Elizabeth, eldest daughter of the beautiful Queen Marie of Roumania, to the Duke of Sparta, former Crown Prince of Greece.

Princess Elizabeth was the second child of six born to Queen Marie and King Ferdinand. She is 25 years old and is noted throughout Europe for her good looks. It is said that she has been made more serious by the sufferings of her family and of the Roumanian people during the great war.

When the armies of Mackensen were sweeping through Roumania and laying waste the country Queen Marie was compelled to fly with Princess Elizabeth and her other children. They spent many days in hiding and slept at night in woodland thickets to avoid capture by Germans.

Queen Marie was an English princess, a daughter of Alfred, Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha. She was idolized by her people, and after their expulsion she and Princess Elizabeth gave most of their time to Red Cross work.

Eau Claire—A well dressed and prosperous looking individual who had been stopping at the Commercial hotel here for a few days walked up to the manager's desk and in an off-hand manner presented an order for $400 on the People's Hide and Fur company of this city, explaining that it was his expense money. Without question the management cashed the order. The stranger has gone and the People's Hide and Leather company know him not. Incidentally the hotel is $400 out.

"This is the third pair of soles on these shoes," said one of my customers as he handed me his little boy's shoes for resoling. Think of it—the service of three pairs of shoes for little more than the price of one! It proved two things to me—that the boy was a healthy youngster and the father thrifty.

Let me put more mileage and looks into your shoes at little cost. Repairing "While You Wait" in a Comfy Waiting Room "We Build Your Heels and Save Your Sole"
